

ABSTRACT

A system and method for generating reactive animation involved in providing a generic link between tools for the specification and execution of reactive systems and tools for graphic animation. The present invention can optionally be used in a wide range of applications, including computer games, navigation and traffic systems, physiology models, and interactive scientific animation. Reactive animation helps make the programming of such applications more reliable, expeditious and natural.